Impressions By The Way.

The fortnight which the passenger spends on an ocean liner in making the Eastward and Westward trip across the Atlantic is well worth the time and the price, when the physical benefit, pleasure and seasickness are considered. The sea breeze is very invigorating and gives the passenger a wonderful appetite—if he or she doesn't happen to be seasick. On the Eastward trip of the S. S. New York the ocean was so smooth that scarcely twenty of the eight hundred passengers were seasick. The doctors say that a little seasickness is good for a fellow—or a woman—being kind of an internal Spring cleaning. A very little of it, however, is sufficient to satisfy the average person. On the Westward trip almost half of the passengers were sick on two different days, half the passengers leaving the dinner table one evening. When one promenades while the vessel is rolling he appears suddenly to be walking up-hill and instantly he feels the deck sink under him. It is the upward movement which makes one feel like giving up hope—and supper. Having the good fortune to escape seasickness in the trips over the Atlantic and the two trips over the English Channel, I had many opportunities to study the afflicted passengers at all stages of the game. Some of the girls fought bravely against it, one little woman in gray walking at least ten miles on deck to stave it off, only to give up gracefully at last. Seasickness is no joke, however, though there is considerable "gag" about it.

Two concerts were given on the S. S. New York in way of social diversion on her Westward trip, both being largely attended, many of the passengers being in full evening dress. Another amusement on the New York was a tug-of-war one day between the teams of men from the first and second cabin passengers. The prize was a handsome cake and Senator Chauncey Depew was the referee. The second cabin men won and in presenting the prize Mr. Depew remarked that he observed that the men with a "pull" always "took the cake." An Englishman who received the cake for the second cabin team said that he knew little about the American "pull," but he did know that they landed the cake—for he had it in his hand. He then paid Senator Depew a compliment, assuring him that no American name was more honored now in England than Depew.

The S. S. New York on her Westward trip had one seasick passenger who was comical enough to make the angels laugh. He was one of Cook's excursionists and hailed from the West. Being taken sick on deck he hurried below to a saloon where he rushed in between a portly German and another suffering mortal. All three were sick and were not keeping it secret. The Western man was tall and lank and lean. Tears flowed from his eyes and his nose and mouth were both leaking. Looking at a perfect picture of despair he turned his head a moment to remark "Blankity blank, blank, blank, I took this for a pleasure trip, and here's what I got."

A voyage across the Atlantic begins to grow a trifle monotonous after the third day—the scenery is just the same all the way, you know. If the sky is clear the water will be as blue as indigo all day, but if clouds obscure the sun the water looks black or dark green. Persons who have not "crossed" before find much interest in watching the water and looking for sharks, whales, dolphins, etc., the first two days, and then they find diversion in scanning the horizon for passing vessels, and playing cards and "shuffle-board" for two or three days. It seems almost a day between breakfast and luncheon and another day until dinner. The last two days pass slowly, with everybody in a good humor. On the morning of the last day every passenger comes on deck carefully dressed and smiling, each one eager to catch the first glimpse of land. And how dear that first bit of land seems, whether it's your native land or not! Then comes the hustle of getting the mail bags and luggage in place for unloading, and the anxiety to get ashore.

Before an ocean liner can land in New York she must report at quarantine in the lower bay, and must also transfer important mail to a government boat. Then the custom house officers board the vessel in the lower harbor, and every passenger must declare his or her nationality to an official. Then passengers are required to form lines and pass before custom officials and declare if they have anything dutiable in their baggage—if they have any clothing, diamonds, or presents. If one declares that he has thirty dollars worth of presents or souvenirs he must pay duty on that amount. These statements are made under oath, which the passenger signs. The officer retains your declaration and gives you a check to correspond with the number of it. When the boat finally makes fast to the pier the passengers are landed in the second story of the custom house and no person can leave until his baggage has been inspected. Passengers form in line and advance to the leading official who details an inspector to look through your baggage. Some times they turn things topsy turvy in your baggage, and again they will only ask what you have. My inspector, with my declaration in his hand, checked up my souvenirs until he had the amount declared and then invited me to walk up and pay my duty. The duty was half the cost of the trifles, and it was a beautiful illustration of the tariff. This experience consumes from one to two hours before you are free to leave the house. Four custom houses in England and France charged me not a cent duty and the loss of time was trifling. Many passengers make no declaration in New York and get through free but they take dangerous risks. In this case honesty is the best policy but it is rather expensive.

A HEAVY ENGAGEMENT.

The Allied Forces Attacked the Petalig Forts on Thursday.

Emperor William Wishes to Reach an Agreement With the Allies Regarding the Guilty and Their Punishment.

Taku, Sept. 20.—The allies attacked Petalig forts at daybreak. Heavy cannonade is going on.

Berlin, Sept. 20.—It is understood that the immediate cause for the issuing by Germany of the circular note to the powers regarding the Chinese settlement was the fact that Li Hung Chang, during his recent interview with Dr. Mumm von Schwartzstein, the German minister to China, mentioned a number of names of alleged high mandarins hitherto wholly unknown as those responsible for the Peking outrages, and said that China was willing to punish them. This explanation seems to be borne out by the following statement made by the German foreign office Wednesday to a correspondent in Berlin:

"What we want to avoid is an opportunity for allowing China to impose any sham concessions upon the powers by delivering up for punishment of persons who had nothing to do with the Peking atrocities. Hence it is advisable for the representatives of the powers in China to designate beforehand all who are notoriously guilty. Germany does not wish to pre-judge the case in any way. She wishes to reach an agreement with the powers regarding the guilty and their punishment."

"Russia, in my opinion, will not now withdraw her troops from Peking, inasmuch as Germany and the other powers remain. She will decide that circumstances have changed and that she must remain aloof."

The German papers, with scarcely an exception, approve the circular note. The Lokal Anzeiger says: "More notoriousness does not suffice for the assumption of guilt. The ministers at Peking must produce proofs against each person charged."

Washington, Sept. 20.—With the German proposition to postpone peace negotiations with China until the persons responsible for the Peking outrages are punished, and the French and Russian notification of the purpose of those governments to begin such negotiations at once, awaiting him, the president found much matter of importance to dispose of upon his arrival in Washington from Canton Wednesday morning. He lost no time in notifying the officials he desired to consult on his return, and the day was largely given up to private discussion. Although it was stated that no answer would be ready to the German note Wednesday, it appeared that the president, after talking over the situation with Attorney General Griggs, Acting Secretary Hill and Assistant Secretary Adee, had arrived at a conclusion as to the nature of the response that should be made. Mr. Adee spent the afternoon consulting Acting Secretary Hill and in drafting the note of response, but all information as to its nature was refused at the state department. It was said that the note is to be gone over carefully at a further meeting between the president and such of his advisers as are in the city. The German government apparently is anxious for a speedy answer, as Baron Sternberg paid two visits to the state department after the German note was delivered. The Chinese minister was also twice at the state department Wednesday, seeking to influence the government not to agree to joint action suggested in the German note.

The conclusion reached in Wednesday's developments is that the powers are dividing as to China and at present Germany and Great Britain stands aligned against France and Russia, while both sides are ardently seeking the adherence of the United States government. The issue appears to be made up in such shape as to dismiss further hope of obtaining that harmony of action respecting China that the president has been seeking so far, and the point apparently has been reached where the United States must take sides or at once proceed to act entirely independent of other powers in reaching a settlement. The Chinese government is urging the latter course upon the state department, but thus far there has been a restraining force in the desire to avoid making the United States the first of the powers to break the solid front that has been maintained up to the present time.

Hong-Kong, Sept. 20.—An imperial edict received at Canton appoints Li Hung Chang, Prince Ching and Sheng to be peace negotiators.

Town Marshal Shot. Mystic, Ga., Sept. 20.—Town Marshal Cason was shot through and through with a Winchester in the hands of James Mauldin, a saloon keeper, in a fight over the arrest of Mauldin's brother-in-law, John Fletcher.

Waldsee at Hong-Kong. Hong-Kong, Sept. 19.—The German steamer Sachsen, having on board Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, commander-in-chief of the international forces in China, and his staff, has arrived here.

German-American Pardoned. Berlin, Sept. 19.—Emperor William has pardoned a German-American named Schulz in Kehl, who, after 20 years' absence, had visited his relatives and been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for contravening the army regulations.

BANK ROBBERS.

Three Men Relieved the First National at Winnemucca, Nev., of About $13,000.

Winnemucca, Nev., Sept. 20.—The first national bank was robbed of about $13,000 at noon Wednesday by three men who entered the front door of the building and with revolvers made all present throw up their hands. There were five people in the bank at the time, Cashier Nixon, Assistant Cashier McBride, Bookkeeper Hill, Stenographer Calhoun and a horse buyer named Johnson. The robbers threatened with instant death the first man who made a show of resistance. One robber, at the point of a pistol, made Cashier Nixon open the safe and take from it three sacks of gold coin. They threw this in an ore sack, together with all the gold coin in the office drawer.

The robbers then marched the five men out through a back door to an alley, where three horses were waiting. The men were kept covered with guns until the desperadoes mounted their horses and escaped. The whole affair occurred in but five minutes. An alarm was quickly given and several shots were fired at the desperadoes as they sped through the town but without effect. The robbers returned the shots, but no one was hit. Officers and armed citizens have started in pursuit of the robbers, who took a course up the river. A posse has also started from Golconda to head them off and it is thought they can not escape.

FILIPINO AGGRESSION.

An Engagement Near Sualloan in Which 12 Americans Were Killed; 26 Missing.

Manila, Sept. 20.—During the last seven days there has been a distinct increase of insurgent aggression, particularly near Manila, along the railroad and in the provinces of Laguna, Morong, Bulacan, Nueva Ecija and Pampanga, culminating Monday in an engagement near Sualloan, at the east end of Laguna de Bay, in which detachments of the 15th and 37th United States infantry regiments 90 men all told, met a thousand insurgents, armed with rifles and entrenched.

The American loss was 12 killed, including Capt. David D. Mitchell and Second Lieut. George A. Cooper, both of the 15th infantry; 26 missing, who are probably dead.

The enemy had been pursued for several days.

There are rumors of attacks on the railroad and of trouble in Manila. Refugees are arriving here from Laguna, Morong and Pampanga provinces. The natives of Manila are restless and many are leaving the city. The hostile demonstrations are particularly marked along the railroad and on the shores of Laguna de Bay.

GEN. JOHN A. MCCLERNAND.

The Distinguished Soldier Passed Away Thursday Morning at the Age of 88 Years.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 20.—Gen. John A. McClernand died at 1:40 a. m. Thursday.

He was born in 1812. He rendered distinguished services on the union side under Gen. John A. Logan and Gen. Grant, notably at Ft. Donelson, Shiloh and Vicksburg.

His death was the result of old age and a general breaking down of the system. About two weeks ago he was attacked with dysentery, and, while this was cured, he never rallied. He had been unconscious for the past 24 hours and had only been kept alive by hypodermic injections of strychnine and nitroglycerine. His wife, two daughters (Mrs. Fred Fox, of Peoria, and Mrs. E. W. Williams, of this city) and son (John P. McClernand, of this city) were with him in his last hours. His son, Col. Edward McClernand, military governor of Cebu province, Philippines, was unable to come.

LIEUT. HOBSON'S STORY.

He Says Dewey Did Not Sink the Spanish Ships—Spaniards Did It Themselves.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 20.—In an interview with Lieut. R. F. Hobson, published in a local paper, Hobson is quoted as saying that Adm. Dewey did not sink the Spanish ships at Manila, but that the Spanish opened the valves and scuttled the ships themselves. He said, according to the interview, that our shell fire did very little damage.

SITUATION IMPROVED.

Gov. Sayers Reports on the Conditions in the Stricken City.

The System of Distribution to the People of Galveston Has Become Systematized.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 18.—The ninth day after the storm, and still the grewsome work goes on of recovering the dead from the gigantic mass of debris that lines the south side of what remains of the city. Sunday 107 bodies were recovered and cremated. Among them was a mother with a suckling babe tightly clasped to her breast. In this imperative necessity of the dispatch of the dead there are scenes witnessed that move the stoutest hearts.

The body of Maj. W. T. Levy, United States immigrant inspector of this district, was among the number. He made a gallant struggle to save his wife and three children. All were lost. The bodies of the wife and children have not been recovered and are still among the uninterred dead. The number recovered and cremated Monday has not been reported, but it will exceed 100.

The task of recovering the bodies that are beneath or jammed into this immense rick of debris, extending from the eastern to the western limits of the city, a distance of over three miles, is a herculean one, and the most expeditious way of removing the whole, from a sanitary point of view, is by fire. This, however, in the crippled condition of the fire department and water works, would endanger the remaining portion of the city. As it now stands, this immense mass of debris strewn with dead bodies, the carcasses of decaying animals, etc., is a serious menace to the health of the city and is the most difficult problem the board of health has to deal with.

The work of opening up the streets and disinfecting them is being vigorously prosecuted. The debris and garbage is being removed, 250 vehicles of every description carrying it out to a safe place, where it is burned, and in a few days all streets will be opened for the passage of vehicles.

The marine hospital corps, which is working in conjunction with the board of health, has established a hospital on the beach at the foot of Tremont street, where the sick and wounded now sheltered in the unsanitary places throughout the city will be taken for treatment, whether they wish to go or not.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 19.—The work of clearing the streets of debris is progressing rapidly under the perfect organization instituted by military rule under Adj. Gen. Scurry. Over 2,000 men are engaged on the work. Ninety-eight bodies are reported as having been found in the wreckage and removed Tuesday, making a total of 1,861 victims so far recovered. This list is far short of the accurate number of dead found, because no official records are kept. Bodies found are buried or cremated, and no systematic record has been kept. The storm wrecked almost every vault in the six cemeteries, and many of the dead were washed to sea in metal cases. So far only one casket has been found. It had been carried three miles from the vault.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 20.—Gov. Jos. D. Sayers Wednesday night wires the following statement:

"The situation to-night in all parts of the stricken districts, as far as known to me, are improved, and will, I believe, show we have fair weather, continue to improve. The method of distributing the benefactions of the people has become systematized and has been reduced to the lowest expenses possible and in this I have had the hearty assistance of the railway, express, telegraph and telephone companies, all of whom have promptly and without charge transmitted supplies and messages besides contributing to the relief of the sufferers. Galveston is being managed by its own principal authorities, supplemented by the assistance of a committee composed of its best citizens and also by the aid of Gen. Scurry. I am also informed that the United States marshal, Dr. Grant, has rendered and is rendering most valuable assistance."

Endeavor to Protract the War.

Spitzkop, Sept. 20.—Gen. Viljoen, who succeeded Louis Botha in the supreme command of the Transvaal forces, is reported to be moving northward in the direction of Hectorspruit with 3,000 men and 30 guns. He is known as "The Firebrand," and will endeavor to protract the war.

Charged With Horse Stealing.

Pana, Ill., Sept. 20.—Lewis French and Frank Mackey, the first named a former leading liveryman of Pana, were arrested Wednesday at Collinsville, charged with horse stealing. French had a large amount of gold and several thousand dollars of spurious money on his person.

Blinded by a Blow.

Lead, S. D., Sept. 18.—While working in a mine north of this city, Capt. Grant Tod, of Lead, was accidentally struck in the back of the neck by a mining hammer. The blow shattered the nerves in such a way that total blindness has come to the man.

Will Increase Their Rates.

London, Sept. 17.—At a conference held at Southampton Saturday the Trans-Atlantic lines agreed upon an immediate increase in third-class rates between the United States and Liverpool and Southampton.

HOWARD-MCGEE FEUD.

One Man Killed, Two Fatally and One Seriously Wounded in a Fight in Tennessee.

Madisonville, Tenn., Sept. 19.—The Howard-McGee feud had a dramatic and tragic climax Tuesday, in which one man was killed, two others fatally and one seriously wounded. Monroe county, the home of the Howards and McGees, had been expecting Tuesday's events for two years.

Tuesday at noon Charles Jones and his brother Joshua entered the Clew hotel dining room which was filled with guests and took seats at a table. A moment later Calvin and Tom Howard entered the room and met the Jones brothers face to face.

In an instant revolvers were drawn by the four men and about 30 shots were fired in quick succession, the terrified guests making their exit from the room by way of doors and windows. When the firing ceased Charles Jones was found dead on the floor with two bullet wounds in his heart and three in his head; Joshua Jones and Calvin Howard were mortally wounded and unconscious, and Tom Howard, the only one of the quartet left on his feet, had a number of bullet wounds in his body.

Two years ago Tom Howard married a member of McGee's family despite the strenuous opposition of the McGees. A few days later two brothers of Mrs. Tom Howard went to Tom's house and calling him to the door began firing upon him. Two of Tom's brothers, Ernest and Will Howard, and George Morrow joined in the fusillade and all three were shot and killed by the McGees. That was the beginning of the feud, since which time it has developed and grown with intense bitterness. The McGees were arrested for the killing of Ernest and Will Howard and Morrow and their sister, Mrs. Tom Howard, remaining true to her husband, testified against them. The trial was set for Tuesday.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

A Portuguese Bark Fired at Sea—Terrible Experience of the Crew, Who Escaped in Boats.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 19.—A sailer from the Portuguese bark Gert-rude, which left Galveston for Rio Janeiro, who landed from a small boat on the coast about 20 miles west of Playa del Este, declares that the recent hurricane washed the sea over the ship, and she was on the point of sinking, but the pumps were successfully worked, and she would have probably ridden out the gale had not the lightning struck her and set her on fire.

Capt. Estaban Olivera committed suicide and the crew abandoned the vessel, ten going in a large boat in charge of the quartermaster and two in a smaller one. The boats drifted apart. The sailor says his companion died on the high seas, but was buried at Playa del Este. Fears are entertained as to the safety of the large boat.

Terrible Gale at Nome.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 18.—The steamer Valencia arrived from Nome Monday afternoon with a large passenger list and $500,000 in gold consigned by the trading companies to two local banks. The Valencia brings news that a terrible gale raged at Nome from September 1 to 5, but that only three persons are known to have been lost.

Odd Fellows Elect Officers.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 19.—The sovereign grand lodge of Odd Fellows Tuesday elected officers as follows: Grand sire, A. C. Cable, of Ohio; deputy grand sire, John B. Goodwin, of Georgia; grand secretary, J. Frank Grant, of Baltimore; grand treasurer, M. Richard Muckle, of Pennsylvania. A resolution appropriating $1,500 to the Galveston sufferers was passed.

Fatal Explosion at Tung Chow.

London, Sept. 18.—The British commander at Taku cables that a fatigue party, engaged in destroying gunpowder at Tung Chow, has been blown up. Eleven Welsh fusiliers were wounded, two British, Indian soldiers were killed and 13 British Indian soldiers were wounded and Capt. Hill and 11 British Chinese infantry soldiers were wounded.

Bodies Horribly Mangled.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Mary E. Curran and Mrs. Anna Holmes were killed Monday at the 55th street crossing of the Chicago & Erie tracks. Neither heard the noise of the approaching train or the shouts of the guard, and were struck by the train going at full speed. The bodies were horribly mangled.

Two Suspects Arrested.

La Crosse, Wis., Sept. 19.—Two well-dressed young men were arrested at Tomah Tuesday, charged with the Wilton bank robbery of last Sunday night. They had slept in the woods all night. They refused to give their names. They answered perfectly the description given of the robbers.

Fines of 50 pennings (12 cents) are collected by tramway conductors of Frankfurt, Germany, for any dirt carried into a car.

An old Chinese proverb says: "The error of one moment becomes the sorrow of a lifetime." That unfortunate country now knows how to appreciate the truth of the proverb.

Frost flowers, composed of the ice which forms on frosty mornings in late fall and early winter, are found on only 26 species of plants. Among these are the frost weed and the heliotrope.

THE BIG STRIKE IS ON.

Estimated That 126,000 Miners Are Idle in the Anthracite Region.

The Markles Offer to Arbitrate, But the Mine Workers Say That All Operators Must Do So and Not a Part.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 20.—The third day of the strike passed off as quietly as the two preceding days. Beyond the occasional stoning of a mineworker going to or from his work, there has been no disorder. It was estimated Wednesday night that about 70 per cent. of the mineworkers of this region were idle Wednesday, which is quite an increase over Tuesday's figures. President Mitchell did not issue a formal statement Wednesday because of his absence from headquarters. He said, however, that from reports he had received he figured on more than 126,000 men being idle in the anthracite district. He added that most gratifying reports were received from this and the Schuylkill district.

The operators appear to be doing nothing toward a settlement of the trouble. They are working the crippled collieries as best they can.

The meeting Wednesday afternoon at Jeddo of the employees of G. B. Markle & Co., who operate the Jeddo, Eberdale, Highland and Oakdale collieries, proved to be probably the most remarkable gathering of its kind ever held in the anthracite region.

It was expected to be a heart to heart talk between John Markle, managing partner of the firm, and his employees, now numbering 2,500, but it developed into a joint debate in which Mr. Markle, President Mitchell, Rev. Father Phillips and National Committeeman Benjamin James took part. It began in a dignified manner, but gradually degenerated into impassioned argument, and wound up very close to personalities.

John Markle said his company stood ready to arbitrate any differences with the men and proposed that the company select one arbitrator and the men choose one. If these two failed to agree they could invoke a third one to join them. He also said that he would abide by the decision of the arbitrators no matter what the award might be.

Mr. Mitchell then arose, and standing beside Mr. Markle, told the crowd that the United Mine Workers' would not accept arbitration on that basis. It must be the whole region and not a part of it.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 20.—The expected clash between the union and nonunion miners in the Lykens valley region was averted by the strikers at Lykens abandoning their proposed march to Williamstown Wednesday night to attempt to force the miners there to quit work. The feeling between the Lykens and Williamstown miners is so bitter that the strike leaders were induced Wednesday afternoon by the borough authorities of Lykens to persuade their followers not to invade the territory of the nonstrikers. Seven hundred strikers were to have started for Williamstown at 6 o'clock with two bands of music, and they were much chagrined when the proposed march was called off.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 20.—The most important development of the coal miners' strike which has occurred since its inception was the effort made Wednesday by a committee of miners employed at the Natalie colliery, Mt. Carmel, who are in close touch with the operators who control that mine—all New York capitalists—to secure a settlement. They came here Wednesday afternoon to consult with several leading mine officials. They said that the operators they represented are willing to adjust the principal grievances embodied in the demands of the Hazleton convention, and they are anxious to get their proposition to National President Mitchell. It is believed that if they can effect their object, the other operators will follow in the same line.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

Alvinza Hayward, the California millionaire and mining king, still wears the style of the beaver silk hat that was in vogue 50 years ago. For half a century he has had his hats made over the same block.

There are still in England two representatives of the old-time fox-hunting parson. These are Rev. E. A. Milne and Rev. E. M. Reynolds, who are respectively masters of the Cattistock and Coniston packs.

When a waiter in a San Francisco hotel was offered $40 a month, with board and lodgings, to go into household service in Honolulu, his answer was that he could not afford the change because his tips far exceeded the proposed wages.—Chicago Times-Herald

Most anything seems to be good enough reason for bringing divorce proceedings. A Washington woman has sued for freedom on the ground that her husband is not as strong politically as he thought and said he was, and Leavenworth sister has just burst her matrimonial bonds because her husband would not take her to church.

A letter has been published in Moscow from Sven Anders Hedin, a traveler, in which he mentions an excursion into Tibet in a direction never before attempted by Europeans. He succeeded in reaching Lake Lobnor, on the shores of which he discovered the remains of an ancient city. The ruins were magnificent and were intersected by broad roads.

A citizen walking past a butcher shop in Beatrice, Neb., saw the butcher and a customer rolling over the sawdust floor in lively rough-and-tumble fashion. He cried them apart and they learned that the customer had come to buy some dog meat. The butcher nonchalantly asked: "Do you wish it eat it here or shall I wrap it up?" They the trouble began.

Walter Crane has designed a table to designate the house in Chelsea where the painter Turner died. It was during his residence there that Turner took the name of Booth. The old sailors of Chelsea called him "Admiral," because of his blue coat and brass buttons, while the boys dubbed him "Piggy Booth." Steps have been taken to preserve the quaint old cottage.

In Colorado it is not necessary that judges of county courts shall be lawyers. The result has been that decisions of such tribunals, when appealed, are reversed in almost half the cases. It is found that in nearly all cases county courts get at the equity all right, but err as to technicalities, and it is suspected that more or less unscrupulous lawyers lay traps to bring about just such results.

THE PLAGUE OF FLIES.

One Stable Will Keep a Large Neighborhood Supplied for the Season.

If you burn insect powder in an old tin pan it will kill mosquitoes. A person, I mention no names, tried it to kill flies, says Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's. It made the house smell like Fourth of July, though quieter. The flies went about their business as usual, and never so much as coughed. Two or three alighted on the edge of the pan. "Hello!" said one. "What's this? Something new? Say, where were you yesterday? I was looking for you all over." It never feazed them. Lavender flowers, they say, will discourage flies. Don't you believe it. They won't do anything of the kind. At the soda fountains, though, where otherwise the sweet slops would attract flies by the millions, the drug gists scatter essence of sassafras. It is rather amusing to watch a fly sail in the door and make for the counter. "Lemmie see, now," you can almost hear him say, "I think I'll take vanilla ice cream—?" and then he strikes that sassafras and cries: "Pue! Let me out of here, quick!" Flies do not like sassafras at all. It is rather an insistent perfume, and I do not know that I myself should care for it for breakfast, luncheon and dinner for weeks all through fly time.

Hear the conclusion of the whole matter. The armies of flies are to be discomfited only by attacking the base of supplies. It is an old saying that if you kill one fly, 40 will come to the funeral. These little skirmishes with fly poison and sticky paper are useless. To fence ourselves in with screens is hardly worthy of civilized people. It is like living in forts besieged by savages. It is sometimes said that the old-fashioned housekeeper who is forever cleaning up is bothered with few insect visitors of any kind. But I put up an umbrella against the storm of indignation sure to break over my head by declaring that the most scrupulous cleanliness will not avail when there is a stable near. One stable will keep a large neighborhood amply supplied with flies daily in the season. It is possible by throwing the manure in which they breed into a pit and covering it with quicklime to kill the eggs and larvae, but where one man is thus careful nine hundred and ninety-nine will not take the trouble. So great has been the progress of the trolley car, the bicycle and the automobile that everyone has confidence in the ability of invention to give us horseless travel, but we shall look long and look in vain for the day of cowless milk. Till then we shall have to endure, with Pharaoh of the Exodus, the plague of flies.

A New Domestic Arrangement.

"How do your folks manage with the family wash, Giddings? We haven't room in our flat to hang a clothes line."

"Oh, we hang ours in the kitchen over night."

"But do the clothes dry?"

"Yes, my wife sits up all night and fans them."—Buffalo Morning News.

The Hoyt success, "A Midnight Bell," is booked for a performance at the Grand on October 5th.

The Wilbur-Kirwin Opera Co. is playing a week's engagement in Lexington at ten, twenty and thirty cents. Susie Kirwin and comedian Kolnle are still with the company. They give "Fra Diavolo" at the matinee to-morrow.

The Cincinnati Times-Star says that Roland Reed's new play "A Modern Crusoe" is weak and disappointing, is too talky and a lark.

The Graham Earle Co. gave a packed house Monday night at the Grand, but gave a very disappointing and weak performance. Manager Porter, in justice to his patrons, canceled the company on Tuesday night. The company came well recommended but was entirely too weak to please Paris audiences. The company left last night for Somerset to play an engagement.

Paul L. Ford, the novelist, was married yesterday in Br. o'ya to Miss Grace Kidder, the original of "Janice Meredith."

THE SCIENCE OF THE CRADLE.

Cradles coming back, you say?
Bliss me! When did cradles go?
Ask of Sleepy Head, who may Surely be supposed to know.
What is Science, that it thinks
It can have the upper hand
In the Realm of Forty Winks, Forming part of Babyland?
Science says they may, indeed!
When was motherhood for aught
But to furnish every need
Ever conceived in baby thought?
Pillow soft of mother love,
Where dimpled form may lie;
Mother's tender face above,
Mother's arms for rock-a-bye.
What does Science know about Baby ways to Land of Nod,
That it tries to place in doubt?
Paths the baby feet have trod?
Faths down the Cradle Road,
Worn by countless little feet;
Poppy-lined and overflowed,
Leading out of Drowsy Street.
Cradlest, Men of specs and brain, Yours the province broad may be Ologies to build; and train
Steam and electricity.
Yours the sea and earth and sky;
Ooze and star and gas and stone;
When you get to cradles—why,
That is mother's sphere—alone.

panion.

The Coming of Guiseppa

EARLY on the third morning of Milton Wakes, William Eyre, of Sceraperlowe, was awakened by his wife suddenly sitting up in bed and laughing with glee odd in a woman of 65, who had for 12 months labored under great trouble. He turned on his pillow, and saw her rubbing her eyes with the back of her hand. Her white nightcap had fallen lopsely back to her shoulders; her hair, still black and heavy, was slightly disordered, a pink flush warmed her thin cheeks.
"Such a dream, lad!" she cried, in a voice whence all the sleepiness had not departed. "Darrand were I flood, an'
big ships, such as one sees i' pictures, were sailin' up, easy as maybe, to th'
New Brig. An' I stood at th' wayter side an' watched an' th' first soul I saw aboard were our lad, comin' home to you an' me."
William's own eyes glistened; it was good to see her roused from her long apathy. "It means luck," he said. "Th' Lord knows as yo' an' me want luck badly enow, though th' money as we had to find for Tom Basker's surety be all paid. We'll pull through, I make no doubt, an'—happen—happen our lad's safe an' sound somewhere."
Then he rose and dressed himself, and went out to the shippin, for it was nigh milking-time. When he returned with his two pails brimming with snowy foam and odorless as wild flowers, he found, to his great surprise, that Mary was kneeling on the hearth, blowing a newly-lighted fire with an ancient pair of bellows.
"Well!" he said, somewhat crossly.
"Why couldn't you stop i' bed till I brought your tea upstairs? You know as th' doctor said you were to rest fro' morn to night."
She turned her face towards him;
sweet laughter still curved her lips.
"Hark at him!" she exclaimed. "I might be a naughty bairn."
Then she worked the bellows until the blaze leaped up the chimney and the kettle that swung from a great pot-hook began to sing stentorously.
As soon as she had lifted it to the hob
she began to lay the breakfast table, for the first time since her health had given way. The omelette toaster was hung upon the bars; from the oven came the crackling sound that accompanies the frying of bacon. William watched her like one bewitched; he had never dared to hope that she would take an active part in the work again.
But as they shared that meal she seemed as sprightly as in the days of her young wifehood.
When they had finished eating, she went to the window and looked down the hillside to Milton. The Nether End was full of caravans and stalls; already one might hear the crack-crack of the shooting galleries, where assembled such holiday-makers as wished to make the most of their time before, in another hour, they departed toward the carrier's old yellow omnibus.
"Why, William," said Mary, "I feel that young to-day. It all puts me i' mind o' when you were courtin' me
... I'm just thinkin', lad, as this even when th' work's done I'd like you and me to go down to th' Wakes together."
The farmer slapped his knee. "Ay, that will we," he said. "I'd have proffered it myself, but for fear o' yo' none bein' able to walk."
So they made up their minds, and William's heart grew glad within him to see how much of her old zest had returned. She laughingly forbade him to help with the household duties, made pointed remarks concerning his bewildered face, and finally she kissed him from her presence while she put the place in order. And when evening had come and they went arm-in-arm to the Nether end, which they just reached as the sun was concentrating his strength for a golden glory, the first and most notable sight they beheld was young Guiseppa with her wheezing lurchy-gurdy and cage of Java sparrows.

away bravely, but her face was troubled for her little show had no attraction for the village folk, and not more than thrice the livelong day had her plump little hands revealed the secrets of anyone's future.
Mary was touched by her loneliness;
she drew William toward the place where she waited.
"I'm sorry for you, poor wench," she said in a low voice. "Hoo seems to be doin' but little business wi' that concertina thing."
When they had reached the cage she cried out with pleasure as she saw the Java sparrows:
"Lord ha' mercy! Birds as green as grass!" Then she spelled slowly the legend attached to the wires. "Your fortune told for a penny! Dear heart,
I must have it done! Dost remember,
Will, lad, how you an' me an' th' owd woman tow'd as we should marry happy?"
"Ay," said William, "I do that. An'
now one o' these little green birds shall tell you again."
He dropped a penny into Guiseppa's palm; at her signal one of the sparrows pertly lifted a folded scrap of paper and pushed it between the bars.
Mary donned her spectacles and unfolded it and read in silence. The message affected her strangely; she staggered a little and would have fallen had not William caught her in time. One hand pressed the paper against her bosom.
"It says good news comin' fro' across the seas," she whispered, faintly.
"An' now I know for sure as th' lad is safe."
Then she fumbled in her skirt-pocket and took out a little moleskin pouch, so worn that the hair only showed in patches. She untied the string and shook out the contents—a sixpence, a threepenny piece, and some half-pence—into Guiseppa's hand.
"It's all I've gotten, wench," she said, "but you're kindly welcome to it." Guiseppa's big black eyes had filled with tears; one or two trickled slowly down the smooth olive cheeks.
"I thank you, ma'am," she said, in a broken English hard for these old folk to understand. "It will find me room and food for night."
Some young men from the neighboring village of Greenlow-in-the-Water strolled up to the cage, and William and Mary moved away.
"Poor soul!" sighed the wife. "She canna be more than 15, an' she looks nearly starved. It's cruel work—a pretty lass like that—a black un, maybe, but as comely as ever I did see."
"Come, loove," said William.
"Thou'rt always findin' pity for something, even though it be a lame duckling. Where be'st thou, for nowth? Bowd Cloudesley or th' Bull's Yard?"
"I be for home," she replied, "I dunna feel as if I could talk to anybody to-night. My heart's so full o' what's comin'. Go you to where you please. I'll be safe enow gettin' back."
So they crossed the green and returned without seeing Guiseppa again, choosing a different way through the Hollow Wood and along the Moor Edge. For the rest of the evening they sat and talked of their lad's childhood—of his pranks and his rogueries. They made surmises concerning the changes in his appearance since he went to sea five years ago; they pictured him with a long beard of ruddy hue, like the moustache that had sprouted on his upper lip. When they retired toward they did not toss uneasily as they had done since the post had ceased to bring his letters, but fell asleep at once and did not waken till sunrise.
Mary was astir first; the new strength made her resolved upon talking up all her old duties. Before William had come downstairs she had "redded up" the house-place. As she heard his stockinged foot on the landing she took a basket of corn and opened the door, so that she might feed the poultry. A sharp cry, however, brought William to her side in a moment. He found her on the threshold, gazing bewildered at the sleeping figure of Guiseppa, who reclined in a corner of the porch. A broken hurdy-gurdy and a cage crushed out side, and in a hollow of her gaudily of all shape lay on the flags at her side, and in the hollow of her gaudily-aproned lap lay two poor stiff Java sparrows.
"It's th' foreign wench," said William. "Mercy on us, how came she here, wi' her music box all smashed, an' her little birds as dead as stones!"
Mary lifted the girl's head drowsy, which had fallen forward. The dark face was all stained with tears. The old woman's touch, gentle as it was, wakened a plaintive little moan. Guiseppa's eyes opened, and she began to sob so bitterly that William stole away on tiptoe.
"You'd best manage her yourself,
Mary, loove," he said. "I cannot bear to hear it."
Then he hurried away, with his hands pressed to his ears, whilst Mary knelt beside Guiseppa, and, putting her arm around her waist, she drew her gently to the house.
"What is it, my pretty?" she said, soothingly. "How came you here, an'
what's happened to your birds?" Guiseppa's tumultuous weeping ceased soon, and she told the old woman a piteous story of how some drunken men from Greenlow-in-the-Water had taken her hurdy-gurdy and kicked it over the green, and when she had striven to recover it they had fallen upon the cage and beaten it with their sticks until the wires were crushed together and the little fortune tellers died of fright. Mary's hands clenched as she listened; she was a plucky soul, and had any of the miscreants come her way they would not have passed unpunished. But she knew that angry indignities were not to be compared with practical sympathy, and she led Guiseppa up the stairs and made her down on the bed in the little chamber on the landing, while she hurriedly prepared a cup of tea. The girl drank thirstily, but ate nothing, and when Mary bade her rest quietly she sank back among the pillows, and closed her eyes.

William heard the story from his wife at breakfast. "Poor wench," he said, "it were cruel hard to take away her means o' livin'. Did she say as how she found her way up hither?"
"Ay," said Mary, "she had watched th' way we went—ours were th' first kind words she'd heard for many a day, an' she were a bit touched like.
You see, lad, her mother died a month ago, an' her father she can scarce reclect, for he only lived till she were a year owd. She's had to support herself wi' fortune tellin', an' as there were naught doin' i' town, she thought she might make summat i' th' country.
Half-starved she has been; Lord!
there's scarce a scrap o' flesh on her bones!"
"Well," said William, "I reckon she must stop here till her strength comes back, anyhow."
"I knew you'd say that, Will," responded the old woman, "for you were ne'er one to shirk doin' a kind deed.
Ay, we'll look after her; you see, th' little birds as good as said fine news were comin', an' it'd be ungrateful none to reward her."
Later in the day Guiseppa's talk became so wild and unintelligible that William was dispatched to the village for Dr. Hattersley. When he came and found that the girl was in high fever he suggested that the workhouse ambulance should be fetched. Mary heard him with some impatience and flatly refused to take his advice.
"Th' poor thing's goin' to bide here till she's better," she said. "I've always been reckoned a decent nurse, an' I can look after her as well as any young madam wi' a white cap."
"Eh!" said the doctor, with a grimace. "I suppose you'll have your own way. But you must know that it will be a great responsibility. You're far from strong yourself—"
"O, I'm right enow at last, doctor," replied Mary. "You see, it's come to me as our lad's alive after all and so I've gotten summat to look forward to. It'd be unlucky, besides bein' wrong, to turn away Guiseppa, when she made her way here, Lord knows how, because she thought we'd help her."
The kindly doctor had nothing more to urge, and so Guiseppa became an inmate of Sceraperlowe. She was seriously ill for several weeks, but her constitution was good (she came of fine Tuscan peasant stock), and before the time of the first snowstorm she was able to be moved downstairs and to sit in a big armchair by the fire. As she grew stronger she began to speak of her departure, but Mary always silenced her tenderly.
"It's for you to choose, wench," she said at last. "My master an' I'd be main sorry, if you left us, for we've come to care for you more than a little. Why none stay wi' us for good?
—there's many an' many a thing as you can help wi'. You see, Guiseppa, I be gettin' owd."
The girl thanked her with luminous eyes and from that day began to work in the place as if it were her own home, taking such an active interest that the old folk could scarce express their admiration. The healthy life developed her southern beauty until she was regarded as the loveliest woman of the countyside. The respect and devotion which she showed toward her protectors was really touching, and as the months passed they began to look upon her as their own flesh and blood. She had the daintiest imaginable hand for butter making, and the poultry under her care was reared with admirable success.
Mary's idea of her having brought luck was confirmed in the following spring, when William received a letter from a London lawyer, declaring him heir to the property of an almost forgotten kinsman. The fortune was large enough to keep them for the rest of their lives without working; but neither cared to give up the life on the old farm, and they resolved to leave it untouched till Will came back. Their faith in his existence was rewarded at morning time by a letter addressed in the lad's own bold handwriting. In it they found that he had been cast ashore on the South American coast, and that he had lain some months in hospital.
He had written as soon as he was able,
but he feared that his letters had miscarried. His left arm, shattered in the shipwreck, had been amputated, and even if he had desired it he was no longer fit for a seafaring life. In short, he was longing to see his old father and mother again and to work on the little farm with all his might.
After that, not a day passed without their expecting his arrival. It was not, however, until the harvest that he appeared at Sceraperlowe. On the third night of the Wakes, just a year since Mary had dreamed of his return, as they sat together at supper, she heard his hand upon the latch. She rose and ran tremblingly to throw her arms around his neck, and clung to him so fervently that William was obliged at last to beg for a sight of his son. And Guiseppa, when her eyes fell on the comely young man, felt her heart beat to beat very wildly; whilst Will, after embracing his father, thrilled with the curious pang that comes to a traveled man when he sees the most wonderful woman he has ever met.
The long and the short of it was that they fell in love at first sight, and that to-day, with their robust ban-tings, they are the happiest couple in Peakland. They do not live at Sceraperlowe, but William bought the next farm for a wedding present and gave him his own land to work, so that the old folk have naught to do save to delight themselves with looking on.—Black and White.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Passing Boats.—Gotham Maid—"We have the best dressed men." Chicago Maid—"Oh, well, we have the best dressed beef."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

There Are Others.—Father—"You have spent a fortune on the races, and what have you realized?" Son—"That I am an idiot."—Brooklyn Life.

A Flight of Fancy.—Visitor—"Good morning; tide's very high this morning, eh?" Ancient Mariner—"Ar, if the sea was all beer, there wouldn't be no bloomin' 'igh tides!"—Punch.

"Another one of those get-rich-quick concerns failed the other day." "That so?" "Yes; old Goldbond's daughter broke her engagement with young Wiloughby."—Indianapolis Sun.

Little Willie—"Paw, is ma a microbe?" Mr. Henpeck—"Why, no, Willie. What makes you ask such a question?" Little Willie—"Well, the teacher told us that badness was caused by a microbe."—Baltimore American.

"What's this?" exclaimed the city editor. "The extremely happy young couple left at once for the south. Why do you say 'extremely'?" "Because," said the society reporter, who was married himself, "I understand neither bride nor groom have any relatives in the world."—Philadelphia Press.

Her Neighborly Reciprocity.—"How do you like your new neighbor, Mrs. Way?" "Not at all. She's awful stingy. Why, she borrowed our tack-hammer and a nutmeg early last week, but when I went over yesterday to ask her to lend me eight dollars to pay on the rent, she said she didn't have it to spare. Wasn't that small?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Billings—"In your club doesn't it sometimes come awkward to have to follow parliamentary rules and refrain from referring to a man by his name?" Gilroy—"Not at all. For example, when I speak of Beesley as 'that apologetic' for a man whose gigantic prominence is his diminutive inferiority, everybody knows whom I mean."—Boston Transcript.

TITIAN OF IMMENSE VALUE.

An Offer of $1,000,000 Made for a Great Painting by That Artist.

The preposterous report that some one had offered $1,000,000 for Titian's celebrated painting of "Sacred and Profane Love," in the Borghese collection at Rome, is due in all probability to the universal hunger for astonishing people, although it may have some color of possibility to the imagination of kindergarten financiers. Insensate prices have been paid for Raphaels, that in the National gallery especially, which came from the Marlborough collection, also for the works of other old masters, but never any such incredible price as this! Yet it would be a hard matter to set the exact limit of value in the case of a sale of Titian, more particularly such an example as the absurdly misnamed "Sacred and Profane Love." If there exists in the world a picture worth $1,000,000, who would be bold enough to deny the right of Titian, the potentate of painters, to be the author of that work? As to the picture known by the title of "Sacred and Profane Love"—a title which Titian did not give it, and which has needlessly puzzled many commentators—it is now generally considered simply as a fanciful or romantic composition, says the Boston Transcript.

But Franz Wickoff, a German critic, has evolved a theory, which has a good deal to recommend it, that this picture represents an incident in the seventh book of the "Argonautica" of Valerius Flaccus, the Latin poet, where it is related that Medea, the enchantress, daughter of Aetes, king of Colchis, unwilling to yield to her love for the Greek Jason, is visited by Venus, who pleads for the lover and endeavors to persuade Medea to follow her to the wood where Jason is waiting. Titian has represented this scene as taking place in the open air; the dawn is just breaking and rosy streaks appear on the horizon. A young woman, richly dressed, is seated on one side of the sculptured stone basin of a fountain, on the edge of which she has placed a costly casket. Her right hand is in her lap and holds a bunch of magic herbs. Deeply moved, she gazes fixedly before her, lending ear to the white to the persuasive voice of another woman seated near. The form of this woman, around which flutters a red mantle, is of a marvelous beauty. She rests her right hand upon the fountain's edge, and with her left holds on high a vase from which issues a light smoke. Between the two women the god of love is splashing in the water with his chubby little hands.

Mr. Wickoff maintains that in the beautiful nude figure Venus is easily recognizable, even were her son not there to indicate her presence. The woman to whom she speaks, and who, though unwilling to yield blindly, still feels herself drawn by an irresistible power, is Medea, who betrayed the king, her father, and followed Jason, the stranger and enemy of her people.

How Silk Equalizes Temperature. It is known to everybody that silk is electrified by friction. Acting upon the suggestion thus furnished, a French savant, M. Henry, has made experiments which show that the electrification of the air inclosed in a tissue of silk produces a circulation of its particles which tends to equalize the temperature. A similar effect is observable in wool, and hence the superiority of silk and wool for garments intended to protect the body against the vicissitudes of climate.

An Early Opportunity. He—"Ah, how I love you! Would I were a knight of old, that I might fight for you this very day." She—"Perhaps you may, Clarence. Suppose you speak to papa now."—Philadelphia Record.

GOSSIP OF LITTERATEURS.

Richard Henry Stoddard, the blind banker and poet, has given up dictating much of his copy and writes most of it. In spite of his blindness he writes a remarkably clear hand.

Charles Upson Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been commissioned by the Royal Academy of Science, Berlin, to prepare a new edition of Ammianus Marcellinus, the Roman historian of the fourth century. The commission carries a grant of 1,500 marks. Mr. Clark was valedictorian of the class of '97, Yale university.

Literary Paris is greatly agitated over the difficulty of deciding which is the genuine copy of "L'Ami du Peuple," which was stained with the blood of Marat when the revolutionist met his death at the hands of Charlotte Corday. So far seven copies have turned up, all solemnly accredited and all bearing the blood stain.

Several descendants of the poet Longfellow have been enjoying the hospitality of the Ojibwa Indians away up at Desbarata, Ont. These Indians are descendants of the Sagamores, so picturesquely treated in "Hiawatha." Miss Longfellow, the poet's daughter, has been formally adopted into the tribe. A select corps of chiefs, braves, squaws and papooses gave in presence of the visitors and beneath the primeval trees of Desbaratas islands a dramatization of the famous poem. The performers were garbed in buckskin costumes, with headdresses of feathers.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A single leaf of the orange tree, carefully planted, will often take root and grow.

It has been observed that artesian wells have a daily period of ebb and flow, as well as the ocean tides, only the process is reversed. The time of greatest flow of an artesian well is the period of low tide in the ocean.

There are 400 miles of icebergs, floating ice, plains of ice and all other sorts of Arctic obstructions to traverse between the nearest discovery to the pole and the pole itself. Perhaps some means of overcoming these difficulties may present themselves within the next century as science goes on in its progressive way. The eruption in 1883 of Krakatau, a volcano on the island of that name in the Strait of Sunda, which connects the Java sea with the Indian ocean between Java and Sumatra, East Indies, was the worst and most destructive eruption ever known, including that of Vesuvius in 79, A. D.

The earth has a shadow, but few ever see it, except in eclipses of the moon. Nevertheless many of us have noticed on fine, cloudless evenings in summer, shortly before sunset, a rosy or pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish-gray segment under it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith, and even passes it. This is the shadow of the earth.

SAYINGS OF THE SAGE.

A woman can afford to forgive her husband for everything except marrying her.

A woman never forgives a man for his kindness in bringing her husband home drunk.

A baby's smile is the sweetest thing in the world; it is a combination of contentment, idocy and gums.

A man can't please all women part of the time or one woman all of the time, but he can always smile at all of their babies.

If men were as noble and heroic as their wives think they are there would be so many monuments around that the street cars would all have to run underground.—N. Y. Press.

The Horseless Nightmare.

"Oh," she said, "I had such a terrible dream last night. It seemed that I had suddenly been deprived somehow of the power to move. All my limbs were paralyzed, and I lay right in the path of an automobile that I could see coming toward me at a terrible rate of speed, with the lamps at the sides blazing like the two eyes of some terrible monster. Nearer and nearer it came, and I, in fearful agony, tried to drag myself out of the way, but was unable to move. I tried to cry out, so that the man who was running the automobile might either stop or turn aside and avoid running over me, but I could not make a sound. On, on it came, as if imbued with life and in a fury of frenzy. I had just given up myself for lost when—" "Yes," he interrupted, "then you woke up. But that isn't the important part of it. By your experience we know that the horseless nightmare has arrived."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Depreciation of Money.

In 1873 a silver dollar was worth one dollar and six-tenths in gold. In 1878, eighty-nine cents; in 1883, eighty-five cents; in 1888, seventy-two cents; in 1893, sixty cents, and in 1898 forty-five cents. Money may depreciate, but there is one standard stomach remedy, which has not changed in half a century, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It always has been the one unsurpassed remedy for indigestion, dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles.

Not a General's Egg.

The freshness of eggs is carefully graded in this country, but our distinctions are surpassed in delicacy by those formerly in vogue among the British residents in India. A distinguished general once happened to stop in Calcutta. At breakfast the great man was served with boiled eggs. He took one, broke the shell, and dropped it with an air of disgust.

"Here!" he cried to his servant, "what do you mean by giving me a bad egg?" The man hurried to his master, and examined the egg with the utmost seriousness. "I entreat your forgiveness," said he; "but it's all a mistake. The stupid waiter has gone and brought you an aid de camp's egg by mistake."—Stray Stories.

A Child's Life Saved.

The following letter was received from Mr. John T. Moore, of 151 Vanee Street, Memphis, Tenn.: "Last July my little son was terribly burned on his chest, arms and legs by boiling hot soup, but fortunately your Lotion was at hand and was promptly applied, which afforded almost instant relief, and the burned surface rapidly healed, leaving no scars." Palmer's Lotion relieves Burns instantly. If your druggist does not keep it, send his name to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, and receive free pamphlet of testimonials and sample of Lotion or Lotion Soap.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

Skin Diseases

When the excretory organs fail to carry off the waste material from the system, there is an abnormal accumulation of effete matter which poisons and clogs the blood, and it becomes sour and acid. This poison is carried through the general circulation to all parts of the body, and upon reaching the skin surface there is a redness and eruption, and by certain peculiarities we recognize Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis, Erysipelas and many other skin troubles, more or less severe. While the skin is the seat of irritation, the real disease is in the blood. Medicated lotions and powders may allay the itching and burning, but never cure, no matter how long and faithfully continued, and the condition is often aggravated and skin permanently injured by their use.

The disease is more than skin deep; the entire circulation is poisoned.

The many preparations of arsenic, mercury, potash, etc., not only do not cure skin diseases, but soon ruin the digestion and break down the constitution. S. S. S., nature's own remedy, made of roots, herbs and barks, of great purifying and tonical properties, quickly and effectively cures blood and skin troubles, because it goes direct to the root of the disease and stimulates and restores normal, healthy action to the different organs, cleanses and enriches the blood, and thus relieves the system of all poisonous secretions. S. S. S. cures permanently because it leaves none of the original poison to re-form in the blood and cause a fresh attack.

Healthy blood is necessary to preserve that clear, smooth skin and beautiful complexion so much desired by all. S. S. S. can be relied upon with certainty to keep the blood in perfect order. It has been curing blood and skin diseases for half a century; no other medicine can show such a record. S. S. S. contains no poisonous minerals—it is purely vegetable and harmless. Our radical treatment is in charge of physicians of large experience in treating blood and skin diseases, who will take pleasure in doing by their life and direction all who desire it. Wonderful and free of charge. Our letters are held in strictest confidence. We make no charge whatever for our service. Our book on Blood and Skin Diseases will be sent free upon application. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, ATLANTA, GA.

Question Answered

Yes August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers, and grandmothers, never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and the seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart Failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries. oct-27-ly

A Cold Night In Canada

The sky at night is a deep dark blue, and the stars are like dropping balls of fire, so close they seem to be almost within reach. The northern lights look as if a titanic paint brush had been dipped in phosphorescent flame and drawn in great, bold strokes across the heavens.

As you pass the electric lamps you see very fine particles of snow caught up by the wind and glittering high in the air like diamonds. But it is a cold night, and you are not sorry to get into your room. First of all, you take a blanket or so from the bed, for there are people in Canada who sleep all the year round with only a sheet over them, to such a pitch of perfection have they brought the heating of their rooms.

After you have tucked yourself in the stillness of the night is broken occasionally by a report like a cannon. Have you ever been inside a bathing machine when a mischievous boy threw a stone at it? And, if so, do you remember how you jumped? When the walls of a wooden house crack in the bitter cold, the effect is similar, only magnified. But you know what it means here, so you only draw the clothes closer round you, thankful that you are snug and warm. And so good night.—Blackwood's.

We have a few tired buggy wheels for sale at six dollars per set. (15mlyt) E. J. McKIMY & SON.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion
